'Ike' Returns After Leading Allies To Victory Over Axis In Europe and H-hour of a five-day blitz during which he will hear from millions of American throats the words, "welcome Ike."

The four sky-master planes bearing the general and his party were escorted to the airport from a rendezvous point 50 miles away by 100 fighters and bombers in a roaring prelude to a roaring celebration.

At the airport some 30 relatives of members of the general's party were given just enough time to deliver a hasty kiss, say the incoherent things common to such occasions, and wave their heroes on their way.

The claims of a parade-loving, hero-worshipping populace made extended reunions impossible for the time-being.

Mrs. Eisenhower — "Of course, I'm nervous," she said — was reunited not only with her five-star husband but also with her 1st star husband but also with her 1st lieutenant son, John.

It was a triumphant homecoming for a modest, balding little man with a gamin grin. General of the Army Eisenhower, they call him.

But from Abilene, Kan., to London, Eng., he is "Ike," and that is what everybody was calling him today. Ike's ship was the first to touch the ground at the airport. It taxied slowly up behind a jeep bearing the "follow me" sign to guide the pilot, and a moment later Eisenhower stepped out — at 11:11 a. m. EWT.

He grabbed Mrs. Eisenhower with both hands and planted a big kiss that would do honor to a movie leading man.

Relatives swarmed out to vie with photographers and reporters in greeting the general who moved slowly through the swarms to grasp the hand of Marshall.

With the swarms of escorting planes, the big transports made a majestic sight. They swept in a long circle down over the spire of the Washington monument, the Jefferson memorial, then banked sharply over the Pentagon building.

The big C-54's glided in the sun as they zoomed low — to an altitude of about 200 or 300 feet — then wheeling over the Potomac to run low over the Army air station at Bolling field and part of downtown Washington.

Eisenhower, wearing a light-weight Summer uniform, put his arm around his wife and posed for pictures, grinning broadly. He shook his head, however, when photographers called for reenactment of what probably was one of the most sincere clinches ever recorded on film.

There were shouts of recognition, followed shortly by enthusiastic kisses, from the wives of other members of the party as their men stepped from their planes.

Eisenhower and Marshall walked to their car, and somehow in the shuffle Mrs. Eisenhower became separated from her husband. The general reached back into the crowd and grabbed her hand.

Then they got into their open reconnaissance cars for the next phase of the reception — the drive to the Pentagon to receive Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson's greetings.

The massed fighter escort gave the field a final, swooping buzz just as the Eisenhower procession started to leave. The procession had to wait a moment at the edge of the field until Pfc. Vernon H. Jansen, of Lorraine, Kan., the lowest ranking member of the party, could be torn away from a radio interview and put in his assigned place.

The party was escorted by 12 heavily armed and armored Army scout cars, six proceeding the procession and six following.

The cars, each carrying five men with pistols, were armed with .50 calibre and .30 calibre machine guns. They are part of the 703rd Military Police battalion, stationed at Fort Myer, Va.

Collision between the automobiles of George V. Riggs, 52, Junction City, and Nelson Snider, 25, Portsmouth, sent one woman to the hospital for emergency treatment early Sunday morning.

Mrs. Nancy Linton, Portsmouth was treated for minor injuries at Berger hospital about 2:30 a. m. and sent to her home.

The accident occurred at the intersection of Court and Mound streets. None of the other parties was injured.

NEW PROBLEMS DELAY MEETING

was said to have cabled Moscow for an okay—a process that may take several days and could delay the Saturday adjournment.

An intensive schedule is planned for this week with public commission sessions each day—probably as many as three a day after midweek. Commission III meets this afternoon to approve the work of its committee on the charter section on peaceful settlement of disputes.

The big five met late yesterday to plan for what they hope will be the last five working days of the conference. They are seeking ways of limiting repetition of debate on issues which have already been threshed out in committee.

The technical committee which had been farthest behind in its work completed its agenda at 1 a. m. PWT, today after a strenuous weekend schedule.

After hours of debate the committee decided to omit any mention in the charter of the right of a member to withdraw; to write in provisions for expulsion and suspension of members; to eliminate all reference to deputy secretaries general and to leave it up to the assembly to decide the length of the secretary-general's term and his re-eligibility.

The committee's other major problem was decided early Sunday morning. It settled that the matter of calling a conference to consider revision of the world charter should be placed on the agenda of the 10th annual assembly meeting if such a conference has not been held before then. It also accepted the big five demand for a veto over future charter amendments.

The intensive week-end committee schedule left virtually no unfinished business for committees. The trusteeship committee still awaits Moscow approval of some language changes in the general objectives section and another committee awaits a similar go-ahead from Moscow on a redraft of the plan for empowering the big five to keep the peace until the security council is equipped with the forces to do so.

ITALIANS BUSY KICKING AIDES TO NEW PREMIER

ROME, June 18.—The committee of national liberation met today to decide the makeup of the new Italian cabinet of Premier Ferruccio Parri, the Milan lawyer who became Europe's first prime minister from the underground movement.

Crown Prince Umberto charged Parri with forming a new government last night after he had been designated as the candidate for premier of the liberation committee.

Informed sources agreed that Alcide De Gasperi probably would remain as foreign minister in the new cabinet. Communist Palmiro Togliatti was considered a good possibility for minister of justice. It was believed socialist Pietro Nenni and liberal Manlio Brosio also would get posts.

The naming of Parri ended a 53-day crisis in Italian politics, which began when northern Italy was liberated. Ivanoe Bonomi had agreed to resign as premier when that happened so that a government representative of all Italy could be formed. But political leaders were unable to agree until the past weekend. Yesterday was virtually the first Sunday in the memory of man that Rome's politicians worked.

in some areas has been affected but no one is able to say how badly.

The Pickaway canneries which had intended to make a full run on pea canning are unable to do so because the persistent rain has halted pea harvesting completely. The canneries are now about one week behind their canning schedules on the early June pea crop. Prospects on the pea crop had looked good about ten days ago. What the eventual outcome will be is hard to say.

If there would be a period of no rain, Mr. Blair said, things would still probably shape up pretty good. But the weatherman has not indicated that there will be any such period in the near future.

Week end showers recorded almost two inches of rainfall in the 48 hour period ending Monday morning. Circleville's weather observation post had recorded 1.95 inches of rain for Saturday and Sunday. The high week-end rains brought the total rainfall for the county up to 32 inches for the year.

High winds accompanied the heavy rains. Work crews were kept busy in the city and county. Trees, or parts of trees, fell over highways and streets throughout the county. City police were called to assist the service department in removing trees and limbs which had blocked Elm and Maplewood avenues, North Scioto and Court streets, Mingo, Franklin and Union streets. The county engineer was called to remove trees which had fallen over Goose Pond Pike and the highway through Robtown. State highway department workers were called to remove a large tree limb which had blocked Route 104 near Fox. They also reported that Routes 104 and 23 were blocked because of high water.

Temperature Sunday reached a high of 80 degrees. It dropped overnight to a low of 66 degrees Monday at 7 a. m. Temperature for the corresponding periods in 1944 ranged from a high of 96 to a low of 73 degrees.

Japan's "shadow" factories in backyards and homes.

Kagoshima, on the southern tip of Kyushu, was lit up when the superforts approached. When they left, it was burning to the water's edge. Smoke rose 12,000 feet. Other forces of the great bombers gave the same treatment to Omuta, a chemical and synthetic oil center, Yokkaichi, a port and textile city, and Hamamatsu, rail junction and aircraft plant center.

The raids brought to 17,500 tons of bombs the total dropped on Japan so far this month.

The figures from Okinawa were just as bad for the enemy. Admiral Chester W. Nimitz announced that in the 77 days of the campaign to Saturday, the Japanese lost 80,459 killed and 1,630 prisoners.

5 Members Of Cabinet May Resign

and the war department would get an able young administrator.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., to resign at the end of the seventh war loan drive. Morgenthau got the job through his personal friendship with the late President Roosevelt. The successor might be Sen. Walter F. George, D. Ga., chairman of the senate finance committee, federal loan administrator John W. Snyder, St. Louis, a personal friend of President Truman or some eastern financier.

Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes to leave whenever Mr. Truman decides on a successor. Sen. Joseph C. O'Mahoney, D. Wyo., was considered a possibility until other cabinet jobs went to westerners from Washington, New Mexico and Texas.

Secretary of Navy James V. Forrestal to leave any time within this year. Forrestal reportedly was ready to leave recently when Undersecretary Ralph Bard resigned. The dope at the time was that Forrestal's job would go to John L. Sullivan of New Hampshire, former assistant secretary of the treasury. Instead assistant secretary Artemus Gates moved up to Bard's job. Sullivan succeeded Gates as assistant secretary for air and Forrestal stayed on the job.

Wallace escaped the rumor hatchet only because of his peculiar status in the cabinet. He was appointed as a reward for his campaign efforts on behalf of the Roosevelt-Truman ticket after he was denied renomination as vice president. Politicians believe President Truman would alienate a large block of left wing support if he withdrew that reward now.

THREE PERSONS ARE INJURED IN ROUTE 56 CRASH

Three persons were injured in a Sunday afternoon accident on Route 56 when the automobile of Clyde L. McManis, 49, Carbon Hill, skidded on a curve about seven and one-half miles west of Circleville.

The injured were the driver, Mr. McManis, who broke his shoulder; his wife, Mrs. Thelma McManis, and shock; and Panna Lynn McManis, 5, a daughter, who received a broken arm and bruises.

They were treated by Dr. D. V. Courtright at Berger hospital. After receiving emergency treatment they were removed to Nelsonville, by the Deffenbaugh ambulance, to the home of Dr. Webb.

The accident occurred about 3:30 p. m. Pickaway county sheriff's officers investigated the accident. They reported that the McManis automobile skidded on a curve, hit a culvert, blew a tire and ran into a tree.

ARNOLD STATES JAPS WILL GET TONS OF BOMBS

MANILA, June 18.—Gen. Henry H. Arnold, commander of the U. S. Army air forces, said today that 2,100,000 tons of bombs will be hurled against Japan in 1946 to wipe it from the map by the end of that year, "if the war lasts that long."

Arnold said at a press conference here: "We plan to deliver 2,100,000 tons of bombs against Japan next year, which will be three times greater than the highest tonnage ever dropped on Germany."

"Since Japan's homeland targets are only one-tenth the size of those in Germany, there shouldn't be anything left of Japan by the end of 1946—if the war lasts that long."

Arnold said that the number of B-29 superfortresses bombing by this fall would be double the number operating in May, when 500 of the great bombers took part in a single raid.

President Wants Speedy Action By Congressmen On Controversial Issues

providing funds for the next fiscal year beginning July 1 for the war department, the labor department and war agencies as APO and the Office of War Information.

Most of the work centers in the senate. The house has only the OPA extension measure and the war department appropriation to pass.

The house hopes to get through by the end of the week with the $39,000,000,000 war department appropriation bill. The senate must then act on it.

The house banking committee ended public hearings Saturday on the OPA extension measure, passed with amendments by the senate. Closed sessions to consider proposed amendments begin today. Floor debate tentatively has been set to start Wednesday.

The principal issue involves efforts to attach amendments to force some price ceilings upward. Administration forces want to eliminate the senate-approved Wherry amendment guaranteeing farmers "cost-plus-reasonable-profit" ceilings. If they do they'll still have to get the senate to agree.

The senate's schedule carries so much controversy that the Bretton Woods proposal, already passed by the house, probably will not get final senate action within the two week period.

Chairman Robert F. Wagner, D. N. Y., of the senate banking committee said public hearings on Bretton Woods which began last week probably will continue through June 25.

The reciprocal trade fight holds the senate's first attention. The house has already approved the administration's request for a three-year extension of the reciprocal trade agreement.

The Bretton Woods agreement may be passed by then. Time is rocal trade act with an extra 50 per cent tariff-cutting authority.

The senate finance committee knocked out the tariff-cutting clause in a close vote. Finance Committee Chairman Walter F. George, D. Ga., who favors the tariff cuts, hopes to get the measure passed by midweek and predicts the administration will win its fight on the tariff issue.

Meanwhile the senate appropriations committee wrestles with the controversial war agencies appropriation bill. The committee is expected to restore the $17,000,000 the house cut from the Office of War Information. This would require house concurrence. The committee is expected, however, to reject the President's plea for funds for the fair employment practices committee which the house denied any appropriation. Unless the senate itself votes the agency funds it will die June 30. If the senate does it will again have to get the house to agree.

The labor and war department appropriations are expected to speed through the senate with most of the administration requests.

As soon as the June 30 deadline is passed, however, the senate will be confronted with another administration goal—the big three meeting scheduled to be held in Berlin about mid-July.

Before that meeting President Truman wants: (1) the trade act passed with the tariff-cutting authority; (2) the Bretton Woods agreement okayed; and (3) senate ratification of the San Francisco peace charter.

against him, however, on the security charter. The San Francisco meeting may run till June 23 or even beyond. Senate leaders expect that committee hearings alone may run through the three remaining weeks before the big three meeting.

15 POLES PLEAD, GUILTY BEFORE RED TRIBUNAL

Only One Denies All Charges When Arraigned In Moscow Court

ary examination that he ordered the Polish home army to maintain itself intact in order to fight the Red army.

It said he admitted operating, during 1944, 25 secret radio stations in Poland and 10 in the western Ukraine. Okulicki also was accused of espionage and sabotage.

The indictment quoted an alleged order from Okulicki to one Colonel Slaboda, dated March 22, 1945, a few days before the Polish group was arrested.

This said:

"A Soviet victory over Germany will threaten not only Britain's interests in Europe but will threaten also all of Europe. Considering British interests in Europe, Britain will mobilize all Europe's forces into an anti-Soviet bloc."

"It is clear that we will occupy first place in this European anti-Soviet bloc which cannot be organized without the participation of Germany which will be controlled by Britain."

"The Polish underground has joined this anti-Soviet bloc organized by Britain."

After Major General Asanasiev read the indictment he questioned Okulicki, who said:

"I admit what I have already testified but I cannot accept the formula of the indictment."

Jan Jankowski, vice-premier of the Polish London government, said in reply to a question: "I am guilty of the main count."

Fifteen of the 16 defendants were present as the trial opened in the glittering trade union hall, which was the nobles club before the soviet revolution. The proceedings were attended also by foreign correspondents and diplomats.

Okulicki requested that court to call a number of Polish officers and one British officer whose name he did not give as witness in his behalf. The request was taken under advisement.

The indictment charged that the group disseminated anti-soviet propaganda through secret radio stations and also maintained constant contact with the London regime from which it received directives.

Okulicki, Jankowski and two other defendants, Adam Bien and Stanislaw Jasiukowicz, were charged with directing underground activity and terrorist acts against the Red army "on instructions of the so-called Polish emigre government in London."

The second group, comprising 12 defendants, were charged with participating in underground activities despite orders of the Soviet military command and with disobeying orders to surrender radio transmitters, printing shops, arms and ammunition.

exceedingly tenuous one, if it may be said to exist at all."

In conclusion, the majority opinion said:

"Since Harry Bridges has been ordered deported on a misconception of the term 'affiliation' as used in the statute and by reason of an unfair hearing on the question of his membership in the communist party, his detention under the warrant is unlawful."

THREE PERSONS ARE INJURED IN ROUTE 56 CRASH

Three persons were injured in a Sunday afternoon accident on Route 56 when the automobile of Clyde L. McManis, 49, Carbon Hill, skidded on a curve about seven and one-half miles west of Circleville.

The injured were the driver, Mr. McManis, who broke his shoulder; his wife, Mrs. Thelma McManis, severe head and face lacerations and shock; and Panna Lynn McManis, 5, a daughter, who received a broken arm and bruises.

They were treated by Dr. D. V. Courtwright at Berger hospital. After receiving emergency treatment they were removed to Nelsonville, by the Defenbaugh ambulance, to the home of Dr. Webb.

The accident occurred about 3:30 p. m. Pickaway county sheriff's officers investigated the accident. They reported that the McManis automobile skidded on a curve, hit a culvert, blew a tire and ran into a tree.

ARNOLD STATES JAPS WILL GET TONS OF BOMBS

MANILA, June 18.—Gen. Henry H. Arnold, commander of the U. S. Army air forces, said today that 2,100,000 tons of bombs will be hurled against Japan in 1946 to wipe it from the map by the end of that year, "if the war lasts that long."

Arnold said at a press conference here: "We plan to deliver 2,100,000 tons of bombs against Japan next year, which will be three times greater than the highest tonnage ever dropped on Germany."

"Since Japan's homeland targets are only one-tenth the size of those in Germany, there shouldn't be anything left of Japan by the end of 1946—if the war lasts that long."

Arnold said that the number of B-29 superfortresses bombing by this Fall would be double the number operating in May, when 500 of the great bombers took part in a single raid.

JAP'S OKINAWA FORCES SHOVE BACK TO OCEAN

Four Cities Blasted By Big Superfort Raid; 3,000 Tons Of Bombs Dropped

Japan's "shadow" factories in backyards and homes.

Kagoshima, on the southern tip of Kyushu, was lit up when the superforts approached. When they left, it was burning to the water's edge. Smoke rose 12,000 feet. Other forces of the great bombers gave the same treatment to Onuma, a chemical and synthetic oil center, Yokkaichi, a port and textile city, and Hamamatsu, rail junction and aircraft plant center.

The raids brought to 17,500 tons of bombs the total dropped on Japan so far this month.

The figures from Okinawa were just as bad for the enemy. Admiral Chester W. Nimitz announced that in the 77 days of the campaign to Saturday, the Japanese lost 80,459 killed and 1,630 prisoners.

5 Members Of Cabinet May Resign

and the war department would get an able young administrator.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., to resign at the end of the seventh war loan drive. Morgenthau got the job through his personal friendship with the late President Roosevelt. The successor might be Sen. Walter F. George, D., Ga., chairman of the senate finance committee, federal Loan Administrator John W. Snyder, St. Louis, a personal friend of President Truman or some eastern financier.

Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes to leave whenever Mr. Truman decides on a successor. Sen. Joseph C. O'Mahoney, D., Wyo., was considered a possibility until other cabinet jobs went to westerners from Washington, New Mexico and Texas.

Secretary of Navy James V. Forrestal to leave any time within this year. Forrestal reportedly was ready to leave recently when Undersecretary Ralph Bard resigned. The dope at the time was that Forrestal's job would go to John L. Sullivan of New Hampshire, former assistant secretary of the treasury. Instead assistant secretary Artemus Gates moved up to Bard's job. Sullivan succeeded Gates as assistant secretary for air and Forrestal stayed on the job.

Wallace escaped the rumor hatch only because of his peculiar status in the cabinet. He was appointed as a reward for his campaign efforts on behalf of the Roosevelt-Truman ticket after he was denied renomination as vice president. Politicians believe President Truman would alienate a large block of left wing support if he withdrew that reward now.

providing funds for the next fiscal year beginning July 1 for the war department, the labor department and war agencies as APO and the Office of War Information.

Most of the work centers in the senate. The house has only the OPA extension measure and the war department appropriation to pass.

The house hopes to get through by the end of the week with the $39,000,000,000 war department appropriation bill. The senate must then act on it.

The house banking committee ended public hearings Saturday on the OPA extension measure, passed with amendments by the senate. Closed sessions to consider proposed amendments begin today. Floor debate tentatively has been set to start Wednesday.

The principal issue involves efforts to attach amendments to force some price ceilings upward. Administration forces want to eliminate the senate-approved Wherry amendment guaranteeing farmers "cost-plus-reasonable-profit" ceilings. If they do they'll still have to get the senate to agree.

The senate's schedule carries so much controversy that the Bretton Woods proposal, already passed by the house, probably will not get final senate action within the two week period.

Chairman Robert F. Wagner, D., N. Y., of the senate banking committee said public hearings on Bretton Woods which began last week probably will continue through June 25.

The reciprocal trade fight holds the senate's first attention. The house has already approved the administration's request for a three-year extension of the reciprocal trade agreement.

The Bretton Woods agreement may be passed by then. Time is against it.

rocal trade act with an extra 50 per cent tariff-cutting authority.

The senate finance committee knocked out the tariff-cutting clause in a close vote. Finance Committee Chairman Walter F. George, D., Ga., who favors the tariff cuts, hopes to get the measure passed by midweek and predicts the administration will win its fight on the tariff issue.

Meanwhile the senate appropriations committee wrestles with the controversial war agencies appropriation bill. The committee is expected to restore the $17,000,000 the house cut from the Office of War Information. This would require house concurrence.

The committee is expected, however, to reject the President's plea for funds for the fair employment practices committee which the house denied any appropriation. Unless the senate itself votes the agency funds it will die June 30. If the senate does it will again have to get the house to agree.

The labor and war department appropriations are expected to speed through the senate with most of the administration requests.

As soon as the June 30 deadline is passed, however, the senate will be confronted with another administration goal—the big three meeting scheduled to be held in Berlin about mid-July.

Before that meeting President Truman wants: (1) the trade act passed with the tariff-cutting authority; (2) the Bretton Woods agreement okayed; and (3) senate ratification of the San Francisco peace charter.

against him, however, on the security charter. The San Francisco meeting may run till June 23 or even beyond. Senate leaders expect that committee hearings alone may run through the three remaining weeks before the big three meeting.

15 POLES PLEAD GUILTY BEFORE RED TRIBUNAL

ary examination that he ordered the Polish home army to maintain itself intact in order to fight the Red army.

It said he admitted operating, during 1944, 25 secret radio stations in Poland and 10 in the western Ukraine. Okulicki also was accused of espionage and sabotage.

The indictment quoted an alleged order from Okulicki to one Colonel Slaboda, dated March 22, 1945, a few days before the Polish group was arrested.

This said:

"A Soviet victory over Germany will threaten not only Britain's interests in Europe but will threaten also all of Europe. Considering British interests in Europe, Britain will mobilize all Europe's forces into an anti-Soviet bloc."

"It is clear that we will occupy first place in this European anti-Soviet bloc which cannot be organized without the participation of Germany which will be controlled by Britain."

"The Polish underground has joined this anti-Soviet bloc organized by Britain."

After Major General Asanasiev read the indictment he questioned Okulicki, who said:

"I admit what I have already testified but I cannot accept the formula of the indictment."

Jan Jankowski, vice-premier of the Polish London government, said in reply to a question: "I am guilty of the main count."

Fifteen of the 16 defendants were present as the trial opened in the glittering trade union hall, which was the nobles club before the soviet revolution. The proceedings were attended also by foreign correspondents and diplomats.

Okulicki requested that court to call a number of Polish officers and one British officer whose name he did not give as witness in his behalf. The request was taken under advisement.

The indictment charged that the group disseminated anti-Soviet propaganda through secret radio stations and also maintained constant contact with the London regime from which it received directives.

Okulicki, Jankowski and two other defendants, Adam Bien and Stanislaw Jasiukowicz, were charged with directing underground activity and terrorist acts against the Red army "on instructions of the so-called Polish emigre government in London."

The second group, comprising 12 defendants, were charged with participating in underground activities despite orders of the Soviet military command and with disobeying orders to surrender radio transmitters, printing shops, arms and ammunition.

VICTORY'S COST

Robert D. Rozell, AS, son of Mrs. Irene Davis, Route 2, Circleville, is taking his "boot" training at the U. S. Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Ill. He enlisted in the Navy May 21. His address is Co. 765-U. S. N. T. S., Great Lakes, Ill.

Gene Edward Clifton, S 1/c, son of Dora B. Clifton Melvin, Route 3, Circleville, is at his home on a 20 day leave. He was aboard the S. S. Enterprize, an aircraft carrier, which was bombed by a Jap suicide plane at Okinawa. He has been overseas for fourteen months.

Pfc. William D. Fowler, ASN 35294867, 1388th Detachment, Eng. For. Company, APO 689, c/o Postmaster, New York, N. Y., will celebrate his next birthday June 29.

Edward E. Wolf Y 3/c and Samuel F. Hedges S 1/c who were graduated together in the Salt Creek township high school class of 1944 met recently in the South Pacific. Yeoman Wolf is aboard the LST 649 (postal address: USS, LST 649, c/o Fleet Postmaster, San Francisco, Calif.) and Seaman Hedges is on board the USS Prairie (Div. 2, USS Prairie, c/o Fleet Postmaster, San Francisco, Calif.). Wolf was allowed to visit Hedges when their ships were in the same port together.

S/Sgt. Neal Wright, son of Mr. and Mrs. Homer Wright, Salt Creek township, was in France on V-E Day and he has been to a school in London, England, and back to France already. He was an armorer with the 19th Headquarters Air Depot Group. He has been in the Army over three years and overseas for more than two years.

M/Sgt. Nolan (Red) Hettinger, son of Cary C. Hettinger, 128 Mingo street, has returned to the United States for a 30 day furlough after two years overseas with the U. S. Army Air Ground Forces. At the present time he is in Jamestown, Ohio with his wife. Sgt. Hettinger will be assigned to the Air Transport Command when he reports for duty at West Palm Beach at the expiration of his furlough. With the ATC he will be in the Caribbean Theater, which he expects will enable him to remain in the states. He had one experience in Iran which the ingenuity of the Air Forces' master mechanics found a method to cope with. In Iran the temperatures would hover in the area of 180 degrees. They had to work nights and sleep days because no one could stand to work in the intense heat. The mechanics made an improvised air conditioning system for their cabin which brought the temperatures down to around 70 degrees. The cooling system was rigged up from airplane generators, water pumps and fans with a few other miscellaneous items. They were the envy of the base because of their much cooler hut.

Another post-war boon, says the man at the next desk, should be country cottages which are at least half as attractive as their names.

ASHVILLE

Almost 200 members and guests of Lockbourne Lodge 232, F. & A. M. enjoyed church services and a tour of Lockbourne A. A. B. Sunday. Members and their families assembled at the lodge hall and went in a group to the base where they attended services in the West Chapel. The service was sponsored by Squadron C-1 which furnishes personnel for Production Line Maintenance, Production Control and Supervisor of Maintenance and Director of Supply and Maintenance. The sermon was preached by Chaplain U. L. Gibson, and special music was furnished by Cpl. Clark and members of the 715th Band. Following services the assembly was served a fried chicken dinner in one of the mess halls, and this was followed by inspection of some B-17's. Explanation of the planes was made by returned Army fliers, who often spoke casually of being shot down and making crash landings. This is the second time that the lodge has been invited to the base where several members of the lodge are stationed. Roy Hedges of Ashville is worshipful master of the lodge. Among others from Ashville who attended the meeting were: Dr. G. R. Gardner, Mr. and

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

FRED: "Is it true, Judge, that a war can't be won without the use of war-alcohol... the kind the beverage distillers have been producing for the government for over two years?"

OLD JUDGE: "That's right, Fred. It is a basic ingredient in the smokeless powder used in virtually every firearm from a pistol to a 16-inch gun. And, in addition, it plays a more human role. The medical supplies which our military doctors use to alleviate pain, combat infection, save lives are prepared with war-alcohol."

FRED: "No wonder, then, more and more people are recognizing the great contribution our beverage distillers have made to the winning of the war with their double-duty product."

SUPREME COURT TO HEAR AP, BRIDGES CASES

WASHINGTON, June 18—The supreme court planned to wind up its already-extended nine-month term today in a split session so that the nine justices may hear Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's address to congress.

Headlining the cases on which decisions are awaited are the government's anti-trust suit against the Associated Press and the legal fight of Harry Bridges, West Coast labor leader, to escape deportation to Australia as an alien Communist.

Other suits besides the AP and Bridges cases involve a test of an Arizona law limiting the length of passenger and freight cars passing through the state; a question over whether the federal government may levy a two-cent per gallon tax on mineral waters sold from the spa at Saratoga Springs, N. Y.; and a group of trucking suits in protest over orders issued by the interstate commerce commission.

There are 15 cases in all still on the docket.

Recently released figures show that in 1944, British farmers had 3,230,000 acres in wheat, an increase of 82.9 per cent over 1939; 1,980,000 acres in barley, an increase of 95.5 per cent, and 3,684,000 acres in oats, an increase of 51.8 per cent.

The Standard Oil Co. (Ohio)

IN 1870, blacksmith shops and livery stables flourished around the village square. It was the era of the open hearth and the "surrey with the fringe on top." Transportation was slow and uncertain, Man's work—and woman's too—called for all the strength that could be summoned into hands and backs... and went on from dawn to dark. But oil had been discovered. And in 1870, with the founding of Standard Oil, its rapid development began. Men with vision saw in this new wonder of the world the long-sought power that would lift the work burden from their backs... give them longer, freer, more enjoyable lives.

"Some day, Son, men will live better..."

TODAY—only 75 years later—this dream has been realized beyond all expectations. Through the magic of petroleum we have mechanized mass production to bring countless conveniences and comforts into every American home... mechanized farming... better heat, light and power... new and far faster means of transportation. And far greater things are still to come. Already in the laboratories of Standard Oil, some of them rest in test tube and on testing block. These are the things we look forward to as today we pause for a moment to look back upon 75 years of progress through petroleum.

Edward E. Wolf Y 3/c and Samuel F. Hedges S 1/c who were graduated together in the Salt Creek township high school class of 1944 met recently in the South Pacific. Yeoman Wolf is aboard the USS, LST 649, c/o Fleet Postmaster, San Francisco, Calif., and Seaman Hedges is on board the USS Prairie (Div. 2, USS Prairie, c/o Fleet Postmaster, San Francisco, Calif.). Wolf was allowed to visit Hedges when their ships were in the same port together.

S/Sgt. Neal Wright, son of Mr. and Mrs. Homer Wright, Salt Creek township, was in France on V-E Day and he has been to a school in London, England, and back to France already. He was an armorer with the 19th Headquarters Air Depot Group. He has been in the Army over three years and overseas for more than two years.

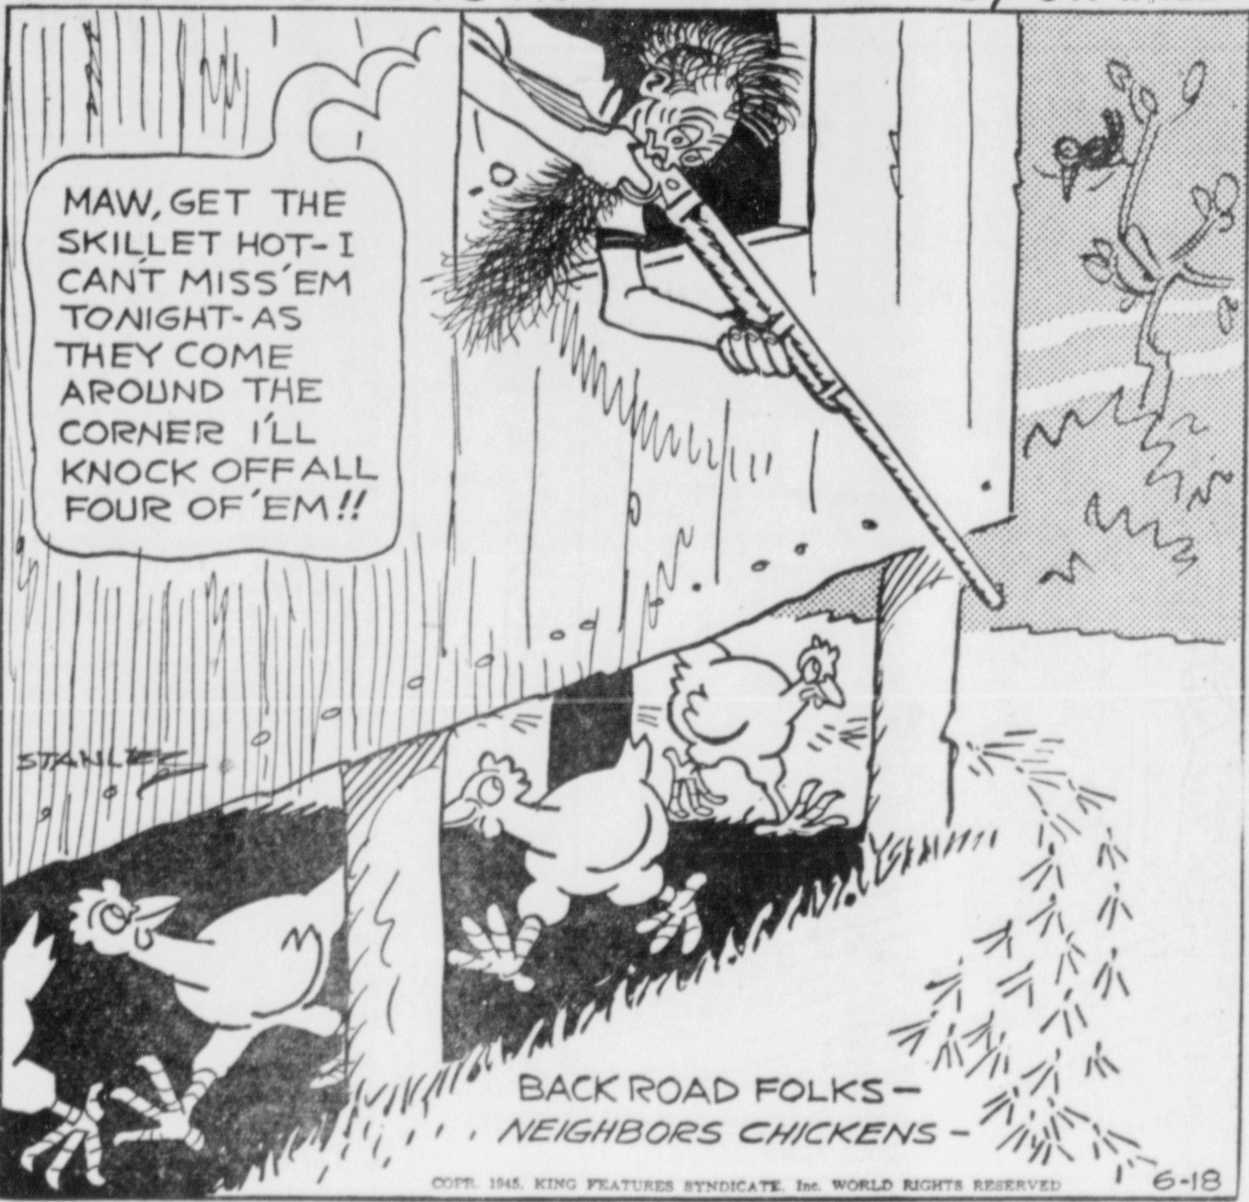

M/Sgt. Nolan (Red) Hettinger, son of Cary C. Hettinger, 128 Mingo street, has returned to the United States for a 30 day furlough after two years overseas with the U. S. Army Air Ground Forces. At the present time he is in Jamestown, Ohio with his wife. Sgt. Hettinger will be assigned to the Air Transport Command when he reports for duty at West Palm Beach at the expiration of his furlough. With the ATC he will be in the Caribbean Theater, which he expects will enable him to remain in the states. He had one experience in Iran which the ingenuity of the Air Forces' master mechanics found a method to cope with. In Iran the temperatures would hover in the area of 180 degrees. They had to work nights and sleep days because no one could stand to work in the intense heat. The mechanics made an improvised air conditioning system for their cabin which brought the temperatures down to around 70 degrees. The cooling system was rigged up from airplane generators, water pumps and fans with a few other miscellaneous items. They were the envy of the base because of their much cooler hut.

Another post-war boon, says the man at the next desk, should be country cottages which are at least half as attractive as their names.

ASHVILLE

Almost 200 members and guests of Lockbourne Lodge 232, F. & A. M. enjoyed church services and a tour of Lockbourne A. A. B. Sunday. Members and their families assembled at the lodge hall and went in a group to the base where they attended services in the West Chapel. The service was sponsored by Squadron C-1 which furnishes personnel for Production Line Maintenance, Production Control and Supervision of Maintenance and Director of Supply and Maintenance. The sermon was preached by Chaplain U. L. Gibson, and special music was furnished by Cpl. Clark and members of the 715th Band. Following services the assembly was served a fried chicken dinner in one of the mess halls, and this was followed by inspection of some B-17's. Explanation of the planes was made by returned Army fliers, who often spoke casually of being shot down and making crash landings. This is the second time that the lodge has been invited to the base where several members of the lodge are stationed. Roy Hedges of Ashville is worshipful master of the lodge. Among others from Ashville who attended the meeting were: Dr. G. R. Gardner, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Trone and Charles Milton, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Mahaffey, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Sark and Eleanor, Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Foreman, Mr. and Mrs. Robin Jones and Robin, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Courtright, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Swayner, Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Kraft and children, Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Cline, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Irwin and family, and Miss Anne Shauk.

FRED: "Is it true, Judge, that a war can't be won without the use of war-alcohol... the kind the beverage distillers have been producing for the government for over two years?"

OLD JUDGE: "That's right, Fred. It is a basic ingredient in the smokeless powder used in virtually every firearm from a pistol to a 16-inch gun. And, in addition, it plays

a more human role. The medical supplies which our military doctors use to alleviate pain, combat infection, save lives are prepared with war-alcohol."

FRED: "No wonder, then, more and more people are recognizing the great contribution our beverage distillers have made to the winning of the war with their double-duty product."

SUPREME COURT TO HEAR AP, BRIDGES CASES

WASHINGTON, June 18—The supreme court planned to wind up its already-extended nine-month term today in a split session so that the nine justices may hear Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's address to congress.

Headlining the cases on which decisions are awaited are the government's anti-trust suit against the Associated Press and the legal fight of Harry Bridges, West Coast labor leader, to escape deportation to Australia as an alien Communist.

Other suits besides the AP and Bridges cases involve a test of an Arizona law limiting the length of passenger and freight cars passing through the state; a question over whether the federal government may levy a two-cent per gallon tax on mineral waters sold from the spa at Saratoga Springs, N. Y.; and a group of trucking suits in protest over orders issued by the interstate commerce commission.

There are 15 cases in all still on the docket.

Recently released figures show that in 1944, British farmers had 3,230,000 acres in wheat, an increase of 82.9 per cent over 1939; 1,980,000 acres in barley, an increase of 95.5 per cent, and 3,684,000 acres in oats, an increase of 51.8 per cent.

The Standard Oil Co. (Ohio)

IN 1870, blacksmith shops and livery stables flourished around the village square. It was the era of the open hearth and the "surrey with the fringe on top." Transportation was slow and uncertain, Man's work—and woman's too—called for all the strength that could be summoned into hands and backs... and went on from dawn to dark. But oil had been discovered. And in 1870, with the founding of Standard Oil, its rapid development began. Men with vision saw in this new wonder of the world the long-sought power that would lift the work burden from their backs... give them longer, freer, more enjoyable lives.

"Some day, Son, men will live better..."

TODAY—only 75 years later—this dream has been realized beyond all expectations. Through the magic of petroleum we have mechanized mass production to bring countless conveniences and comforts into every American home... mechanized farming... better heat, light and power... new and far faster means of transportation. And far greater things are still to come. Already in the laboratories of Standard Oil, some of them rest in test tube and on testing block. These are the things we look forward to as today we pause for a moment to look back upon 75 years of progress through petroleum.

ECONOMY OF SCARCITY

It is a pleasure to dream that, when these present wars are over, the nations, or at least the most advanced ones, will settle down to what economists hopefully call an "economy of abundance." There is certainly ample opportunity for it, in all the countries that are reasonably civilized and have adequate resources, or can make a fair living by trade and transport. Surely there could be food, clothing and shelter for everybody, with a reasonable amount of luxury, if people in general could agree about such things as procedure and co-operation, division of the proceeds, and so on.

But as matters stand, people right here, in the most intelligent and progressive and divinely favored country on earth, probably get no more than half of the things they could have, if only their productive energies were released.

Here is an example. The average factory worker in this country doesn't own his own home, and says he can't afford to, because it costs too much. And why does it cost too much? Apparently, speaking in general, because the men who build the houses are afraid that, if they did a full day's work for their good day's pay, pretty soon there wouldn't be any more work.

But under a rational and intelligent system, work makes more work, and probably would continue doing so indefinitely, if everybody would wake up and go "all out" for a general system of creative enterprise.

PRISON CAMPS

THE horrible German prison camps recall the revulsion caused after the Civil War by accounts of ill treatment of Northern prisoners in Andersonville. This Georgia prison was said to have cost the lives of 12,000 men in its year of operation. For this the chief jailer, Henry Wirz, was tried in 1865 and executed.

There is one great difference between the horrors of Andersonville and those of Dachau and the other German slaughterhouses of this war. Despite the charges of politicians and newspapers seeking their own advantage at the expense of sectional good will, no satisfactory evidence ever showed that the treatment at Andersonville was the policy of President Jefferson Davis and the Confederate government. Dachau, on the other hand, is an embodiment of Nazism.

It is time for the Axis to get the ax in Argentina.

Tokyo says that "Okinawa was never intended to decide the fate of Japan". Not so intended by the Japanese, maybe, but its fall will settle their fate, just the same.

Only a Jap could explain why they kill their own wounded men; and maybe even they don't know.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, June 18—Great hopes are daily expressed for new San Francisco results to establish genuine peace.

The air is filled with fresh efforts and advice to design a living relationship with Russia.

The world is struggling toward peace across the front pages from Cols. 1 to 8 these days with problems of Poland, veto powers, world courts and small nations.

But the soundest commentary on how much has been accomplished—how far we have been able to go—lies behind a one-sentence report that Navy Secretary James Forrestal has been at the White House several times lately.

It can be said the Navy is working up a new program for post-war defense power and the authorities from the top down (and I mean the White House as well as the Navy Department) already have decided there is not to be much economy in their naval planning.

Details well may come into the category of secrets and legitimately are subject to voluntary censorship. Yet it is no secret this nation will wind up this war with a Navy much stronger than the combined fleets afloat in all other nations.

I published sometime back an estimate that our Navy would be 5 to 1 over Britain by the end. Since then the British have gone into warship building, I understand. But the estimate still holds good, at least as a broad numerical picture of our relative prospective power on the high seas.

Ours will be even more than a two-ocean Navy, and with its great acceleration in flying power, already is measured by some experts, as a three-ocean force. (You can name the third ocean).

Two good naval bases in the Philippines also are being provided by naval authorities. Maryland's Senator Tydings, who has returned from a Pacific trip, says the Filipinos are anxious for us to have these and any others we want, in view of their disastrous experience from the Japanese invasion.

A good many senators also want to see us get the Jap island bases in the Pacific, and they have their eye especially on Turk (which we have not yet captured.)

This is in the trusteeship mill at San Francisco—the operation of which might well be observed from now on, in the light of the established prospect that our Navy is to be larger than all others combined and must therefore weigh the responsibility of the seas on her prow.

The hearings of the special house committee on the youth draft proposals of the Army also might be classified by some as a classic commentary on how far we have been able to go in the struggle toward peace—but this is an entirely different proposition.

In the first place, Mr. Truman has said nothing about it. Questions at Press conferences as to whether he favored the Army program to take every boy away from his home for a year in the Army, have brought no commitment (Mr. Roosevelt favored the plan.)

In the second place, congress is paying but little attention to the Woodrum hearings, they are generally considered as an airing of pent-up steam on a high-running subject. No action is expected anytime soon.

DIET AND HEALTH

Treating The "Itch"

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M. D.

THE war has brought out new treatments for many disorders, some serious and some just troublesome. In the latter group is a disease called scabies or the itch. This is a condition caused by a tiny parasite which burrows under the skin and causes a great deal of itching. As a result of scratching a rash develops made up of pimples and scabs.

Many different forms of treatment for scabies have been employed. Doctors Simon S. Rubin and Harvey Blank of the Medical Corps of the United States Army have suggested a treatment which they find not only effective but quick. The treatment requires only a three-hour period. It is carried out as follows:

Thorough Scrubbing
The patient thoroughly scrubs his body for fifteen minutes with soap and water, using a hand brush, paying special attention to the hands, wrists, elbows, armpits, buttocks, abdomen and thighs. The face and scalp are not treated.

The patient then takes a warm bath and scrubs his body again with soap and water for a half hour. The skin is then carefully dried and an ointment applied. This ointment is made up of sulphur, potassium carbonate, lanolin and petrolatum. The ointment is spread over the affected skin.

The patient is then wrapped in a sheet and two wool blankets, and following this, remains in bed in a warm room. After two hours another bath is taken and all of the ointment removed by again scrubbing with soap and water. It is important to get all of the ointment off in order to keep inflammation of the skin from resulting from the use of the sulphur.

Zinc Oxide Ointment
After drying, the skin is covered with a thin layer of a zinc oxide ointment. Meanwhile all of the patient's clothing, including the blankets, should be sterilized. This is important in order to prevent reinfection.

Of 266 patients treated in this way, 217 were completely cured and only five of the patients developed any skin inflammation from the treatment.

Perhaps the greatest value of this form of treatment is that it is carried out so quickly. Of course it may be that more stubborn cases may be encountered which may require a longer course of treatment. In any event, the method is well worth trying in each case of scabies or itch.

QUESTION AND ANSWER

W. B.:—I always seem to have a cold. My nose runs all the time. What would cause this?

Answer:—It is probable that you have allergic rhinitis, a condition which is related to hay fever. It is due to sensitivity to some protein, pollen, dust or other material with which you come in contact. An allergist should be consulted about this matter. The use of ephedrine or adrenalin may be helpful in relieving the symptoms.

CHAPTER NINETEEN

FOR THREE days Angela had not been herself. Terry noticed it mostly in the morning when she brought in her breakfast tray. The child's eagerness was forced, her usual solicitude, "Did the senorita sleep well last night? I hope the senorita is verree hungree because I have brought her an excellent breakfast," were almost automatic. And Terry had caught a look of bewilderment and fear in the large brown eyes on several occasions.

She hesitated to demand a confidence. Angela might become more frightened. But this morning the small brown face looked pinched and woebegone. She felt something must be done.

The swift little hands were smoothing the bed covers and arranging the brightly painted tray on Terry's lap. Terry smiled at her and asked gently, "Do you like asadas, Angela?"

The brown eyes popped open wider. Angela breathed, "Oh, yes, Senorita!"

"Well, I'll tell you a secret," Terry whispered. "Senor Kimberly is planning a very big asada, with barbecue and dances and singing. Everyone who works on the estancia is to be invited."

In an instant the child's dark mood had vanished before enchantment and rapture. "When?" she cried.

"Very soon," Terry promised. "It will be to celebrate the building of the first house." She watched Angela surreptitiously as she went on casually, "You ARE happy over the new house you are going to have, aren't you, Angela?"

Angela's small face glowed with intense joy. "Oh, yes, Senorita! Very happy!"

"You haven't seemed very happy lately," Terry murmured. "Is there anything wrong?"

The fear Terry had been expecting leaped into the child's eyes. "Oh, no, Senorita! I am verree happy! Verree happy!"

Terry didn't press the subject, but later she mentioned it to Jim, as they unpacked samples of curtain material in Jim's sun-filled sewing room.

Jim, looking as dainty as a valentine in his crisp blue cotton frock, nodded vigorously.

"I've noticed the child," she said. "I asked the housekeeper about it only this morning. I thought she might have been in a bit of trouble with the servants. But apparently it's nothing here. It must be trouble at home."

Terry regarded the bright samples as she laid them out. "You want each woman to choose her own curtains, don't you?" she began thoughtfully. "Do you suppose if I—"

Jim reached to ring a bell even as she beamed at Terry. Decision and action with Jim were always simultaneous. "That's exactly what you should do. Take some samples to Angela's house. And maybe while her mother is choosing you'll find out what's wrong." She turned to the servant who appeared, and ordered Senorita Arnold's horse saddled at once.

The pampas had never seemed so lovely to Terry as she rode that morning through a slow waving sea of grass beneath the warm, deep blue of the Argentine sky. She could see herds of cattle and sheep grazing in the distance. Humming birds, vivid with gold and scarlet, and bright thrushes with their cheery calls darted about through the sunny air. A sense of content and well-being flooded through her. For the moment she was a part of this immensity of estancia, with a definite responsibility of looking out for the welfare of one of its peon families.

Angela's mother was standing by the doorway of their cottage as Terry rode up, waving. Terry was wondering whether she should bring up the subject of Angela's secret trouble. But the instant she had tied her horse to a post and moved into the shelter of the house with the woman, she knew she could not mention it. Because in Angela's mother's eyes was the same bewilderment and fear!

She chattered on brightly, if haltingly, in her uncertain Spanish as Angela's mother raced about making mate, and brought out the clean length of the rough table. Slowly Angela's mother, too, was lured out of her private worries with the delight of the new house, these beautiful materials that would soon hang at her windows, the asada. . . . Breathlessly she made her selection.

Terry nodded as the peon woman looked up quickly for reassurance. "You choose well. It will be very pretty!"

Angela's mother trembled with excitement. Nervously she tucked a wisp of black hair back into her neat low knot. Then she burst out, "Senora Kimberly is most kind to us!" Her dark eyes so like Angela's searched Terry's face suddenly with tense thought. She was, Terry felt, on the verge of confiding.

Terry said gently, "Senora Kimberly wants you to be happy. You know that."

Terry said gently, "Senora Kimberly wants you to be happy. You know that."

The woman's dark face was a battleground of emotions. "I know that," she repeated dully, then suddenly burst out passionately, "But, Senorita—"

Even as Terry waited for the words, the sound of a galloping horse outside brought terror to the woman's face. She turned and ran out of the house, around to the back. When Terry reached her, she was just gathering up the child, Pedro, in her arms in a fierce gesture of protection.

Terry followed her frightened gaze now toward the horseman. She heard the woman's sigh of relief as the animal came to a stop and the gaucho dropped out of the saddle. It was Angela's father.

The station wagon was standing before Sandy's office when Terry rode by on her way back to the estancia. On sudden impulse she left her horse beside it and went in.

Brooks was with Sandy in the latter's neat cubicle. He looked surprised and pleased at sight of Terry in the doorway. "You're beginning to look at home in your boots and gaucho shirt," he said.

"To the saddle born, eh?" Terry laughed. She came into the room, flicking her short whip thoughtfully. "By the way, there isn't any trouble among the workers, is there?"

There was a moment of silence. Terry looked up to find Brooks' and Sandy's eyes meeting in amazement. Then Brooks gave a short laugh.

"See here, are you going to be one of those people with hunches, like Jim?" And at Terry's puzzled face, he added, "Sandy and I were just discussing the strange wave of uneasiness and fear that seems to have infected the workers. We hope it's not this secret organization Artigas was speaking about."

"Well, whatever it is," Terry said, "it's causing plenty of trouble BETWEEN the peons as well as among them. Angela's father didn't chase me off the grounds, but he didn't give me any rousing invitation to come around again—and from the way he looked at his wife I think they're having trouble right now over what he's afraid she told me."

Brooks and Sandy asked the question together. "What did she tell you?"

Terry laughed. "Nothing. But she will—or one of them will. Leave it to Sherlock Arnold."

Sandy grinned at her warmly, and Brooks' anxious frown cleared momentarily.

"Luck to you, Sherlock," he said quietly.

STARS SAY—

For Monday, June 18

Monday's astrological forecast is for a rather fortunate turn in public affairs, with dramatic and happy culminations or celebrations of a community or fraternal nature, yet there are signs of setbacks, mean antagonisms, sinister attacks or other undercover situations to vanquish. It is urged that all sense of obligation and responsibility, justice and duty of a private quality, be strictly adhered to and enforced prudently.

Those whose birthday it is may enjoy some public approval and honor, with celebrations and dramatic events, yet be confronted by obstacles, delays, sinister and underhanded matters to try the temper and test the soul. In all connections, observe a sense of duty, obligations and be just and fair in all needful decisions, personal and business.

A child born on this day may have many trials and obstacles in life yet enjoy honors and public support and confidence.

INDIANAPOLIS — Winter's first week of June broke many cities' records and almost broke the heart of a newspaperman at Alexandria, Ind. He wrote gloomily, "Unless the records of all former years are ignored, summer will be along one of these days."

TOWN GETS PLANE-WISE

In 1933 a two-seated army-model hydroplane which alighted on the Wabash rived drew a crowd of more than 200 curious persons. Today they hardly glance at the hundreds of naval training planes which fly over the town from nearby Bunker Hill Naval Station.

"The Authority on Authorities"

Scoring Correctly

IN PRACTICALLY all parts of the country, reports crop up occasionally about changes in the scoring of both rubber and duplicate contract bridge, causing confusion and arguments. To straighten out people who have been misled in that way, here goes for a simple summary of the official scoring. Let's start with rubber scoring, then give the few ways in which duplicate scoring is different.

Rubber Contract Bridge

Odd tricks bid and won count: Clubs or Diamonds, 20 each; Hearts or spades, 30 each; No Trump, 40 for the first, 30 for each subsequent. Doubling doubles those values, redoubling quadruples them. Vulnerability does not affect them. 100 such points constitute a game.

Overtricks count: Undoubled, the trick value; doubled, 100 not vulnerable, 200 vulnerable; redoubled, 200 not vulnerable, 400 vulnerable.

Making any doubled or redoubled contract, 50.

Undertricks count for defenders: Undoubled, 50 not vulnerable, 100 vulnerable; doubled, 100 for the first, 200 for each subsequent, not vulnerable, and 200 for the first, 300 for each subsequent, vulnerable; redoubled, twice the doubled value.

President Truman Makes A Slip at Press Confab

Foresee Surplus Property Disposal Widely Revised

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—President Truman made a slip—rare for him—at one of his recent news conferences. Asked whether he favored the Wagner full employment bill, he said yes, that he endorsed the main provisions of the legislation.

Mr. Truman then reminded reporters that he was one of the co-authors of the bill.

The president apparently was referring to the so-called Kilgore war demobilization bill providing for an elaborate program of increased government unemployment compensation to discharged war workers and other federal aids to cushion against the shock of demobilization.

The Senate rejected this bill. But the president, then a senator from Missouri, was one of its authors.

Mr. Truman was not far off base, however. The Senate War Investigating committee, of which he was chairman while in the Senate, last December issued a report in which it advocated a bill similar to the full employment measure. Veteran news writers believe the slip will result in the president being more careful in answering questions at news conferences.

Policies will be streamlined and multiple checks instituted to guard against any of the criticisms which belabored the surplus property disposal operations after World War I.

ECONOMY OF SCARCITY

It is a pleasure to dream that, when these present wars are over, the nations, or at least the most advanced ones, will settle down to what economists hopefully call an "economy of abundance." There is certainly ample opportunity for it, in all the countries that are reasonably civilized and have adequate resources, or can make a fair living by trade and transport. Surely there could be food, clothing and shelter for everybody, with a reasonable amount of luxury, if people in general could agree about such things as procedure and co-operation, division of the proceeds, and so on.

But as matters stand, people right here, in the most intelligent and progressive and divinely favored country on earth, probably get no more than half of the things they could have, if only their productive energies were released.

Here is an example. The average factory worker in this country doesn't own his own home, and says he can't afford to, because it costs too much. And why does it cost too much? Apparently, speaking in general, because the men who build the houses are afraid that, if they did a full day's work for their good day's pay, pretty soon there wouldn't be any more work.

But under a rational and intelligent system, work makes more work, and probably would continue doing so indefinitely, if everybody would wake up and go "all out" for a general system of creative enterprise.

PRISON CAMPS

THE horrible German prison camps recall the revulsion caused after the Civil War by accounts of ill treatment of Northern prisoners in Andersonville. This Georgia prison was said to have cost the lives of 12,000 men in its year of operation. For this the chief jailer, Henry Wirz, was tried in 1865 and executed.

There is one great difference between the horrors of Andersonville and those of Dachau and the other German slaughterhouses of this war. Despite the charges of politicians and newspapers seeking their own advantage at the expense of sectional good will, no satisfactory evidence ever showed that the treatment at Andersonville was the policy of President Jefferson Davis and the Confederate government. Dachau, on the other hand, is an embodiment of Nazism.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, June 18—Great hopes are daily expressed for new San Francisco results to establish genuine peace.

The air is filled with fresh efforts and advice to design a living relationship with Russia.

The world is struggling toward peace across the front pages from Cols. 1 to 8 these days with problems of Poland, veto powers, world courts and small nations.

But the soundest commentary on how much has been accomplished—how far we have been able to go—lies behind a one-sentence report that Navy Secretary James Forrestal has been at the White House several times lately.

It can be said the Navy is working up a new program for post-war defense power and the authorities from the top down (and I mean the White House as well as the Navy Department) already have decided there is not to be much economy in their naval planning.

Details well may come into the category of secrets and legitimately are subject to voluntary censorship. Yet it is no secret this nation will wind up this war with a Navy much stronger than the combined fleets afloat in all other nations.

I published sometime back an estimate that our Navy would be 5 to 1 over Britain by the end. Since then the British have gone into warship building, I understand. But the estimate still holds good, at least as a broad numerical picture of our relative prospective power on the high seas.

Ours will be even more than a two-ocean Navy, and with its great acceleration in flying power, already is measured by some experts, as a three-ocean force. (you can name the third ocean).

Two good naval bases in the Philippines also are being provided by naval authorities. Maryland's Senator Tydings, who has returned from a Pacific trip, says the Filipinos are anxious for us to have these and any others we want, in view of their disastrous experience from the Japanese invasion.

A good many senators also want to see us get the Jap island bases in the Pacific, and they have their eye especially on Turk (which we have not yet captured.)

This is in the trusteeship mill at San Francisco—the operation of which might well be observed from now on, in the light of the established prospect that our Navy is to be larger than all others combined and must therefore weigh the responsibility of the seas on her prow.

The hearings of the special house committee on the youth draft proposals of the Army also might be classified by some as a classic commentary on how far we have been able to go in the struggle toward peace—but this is an entirely different proposition.

In the first place, Mr. Truman has said nothing about it. Questions at Press conferences as to whether he favored the Army program to take every boy away from his home for a year in the Army, have brought no commitment (Mr. Roosevelt favored the plan.)

In the second place, congress is paying but little attention to the Woodrum hearings, they are generally considered as an airing of pent-up steam on a high-running subject. No action is expected anytime soon.

Treating The "Itch"

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

THE war has brought out new treatments for many disorders, some serious and some just troublesome. In the latter group is a disease called scabies or the itch. This is a condition caused by a tiny parasite which burrows under the skin and causes a great deal of itching. As a result of scratching a rash develops made up of pimples and scabs.

Many different forms of treatment for scabies have been employed. Doctors Simon S. Rubin and Harvey Clark of the Medical Corps of the United States Army have suggested a treatment which they find not only effective but quick. The treatment requires only a three-hour period. It is carried out as follows:

Thorough Scrubbing
The patient thoroughly scrubs his body for fifteen minutes with soap and water, using a hand brush, paying special attention to the hands, wrists, elbows, armpits, buttocks, abdomen and thighs. The face and scalp are not treated.

The patient then takes a warm bath and scrubs his body again with soap and water for a half hour. The skin is then carefully dried and an ointment applied. This ointment is made up of sulphur, potassium carbonate, lanolin and petrolatum. The ointment is spread over the affected skin.

The patient is then wrapped in a sheet and two wool blankets, and following this, remains in bed in a warm room. After two hours another bath is taken and all of the ointment removed by again scrubbing with soap and water. It is important to get all of the ointment off in order to keep inflammation of the skin from resulting from the use of the sulphur.

Zinc Oxide Ointment
After drying, the skin is covered with a thin layer of a zinc oxide ointment. Meanwhile all of the patient's clothing, including the blankets, should be sterilized. This is important in order to prevent reinfection.

Of 266 patients treated in this way, 217 were completely cured and only five of the patients developed any skin inflammation from the treatment.

Perhaps the greatest value of this form of treatment is that it is carried out so quickly. Of course it may be that more stubborn cases may be encountered which may require a longer course of treatment. In any event, the method is well worth trying in each case of scabies or itch.

QUESTION AND ANSWER

W. E.:—I always seem to have a cold. My nose runs all the time. What would cause this?

Answer:—It is probable that you have allergic rhinitis, a condition which is related to hay fever. It is due to sensitivity to some protein, pollen, dust or other material with which you come in contact. An allergist should be consulted about this matter. The use of ephedrine or adrenalin may be helpful in relieving the symptoms.

CHAPTER NINETEEN

FOR THREE days Angela had not been herself. Terry noticed it mostly in the morning when she brought in her breakfast tray. The child's eagerness was forced, her usual solicitude, "Did the senorita sleep well last night? I hope the senorita is verree hungry because I have brought her an excellent breakfast," were almost automatic. And Terry had caught a look of bewilderment and fear in the large brown eyes on several occasions.

She hesitated to demand a confidence. Angela might become more frightened. But this morning the small brown face looked pinched and woebegone. She felt something must be done.

The swift "little hands" were smoothing the bed covers and arranging the brightly painted tray on Terry's lap. Terry smiled at her and asked gently, "Do you like asada, Angela?"

The brown eyes popped open wider. Angela breathed, "Oh, yes, Senorita!"

"Well, I'll tell you a secret," Terry whispered. "Senor Kimberly is planning a very big asada, with barbecue and dances and singing. Everyone who works on the estancia is to be invited."

In an instant the child's dark mood had vanished before enchantment and rapture. "When?" she cried.

"Very soon," Terry promised. "I will be to celebrate the building of the first house." She watched Angela surreptitiously as she went on casually, "You ARE happy over the new house you are going to have, aren't you, Angela?"

Angela's small face glowed with intense joy. "Oh, yes, Senorita! Very happy!"

"You haven't seemed very happy lately," Terry murmured. "Is there anything wrong?"

The fear Terry had been expecting leaped into the child's eyes. "Oh, no, Senorita! I am verree happy! Verree happy!"

Terry didn't press the subject, but later she mentioned it to Jim, as they unpacked samples of curtain material in Jim's sun-filled sewing room.

Jim, looking as dainty as a valentine in her crisp blue cotton frock, nodded vigorously.

"I've noticed the child," she said. "I asked the housekeeper about it only this morning. I thought she might have been in a bit of trouble with the servants. But apparently it's nothing here. It must be trouble at home."

Terry regarded the bright samples as she laid them out. "You want each woman to choose her own curtains, don't you?" she began thoughtfully. "Do you suppose if I—"

Jim reached to ring a bell even as she beamed at Terry. Decision and action with Jim were always simultaneous. "That's exactly what you should do. Take some samples to Angela's house. And maybe while her mother is choosing you'll find out what's wrong." She turned to the servant who appeared, and ordered Senorita Arnold's horse saddled at once.

The pampas had never seemed so lovely to Terry as she rode that morning through a slow waving sea of grass beneath the warm, deep blue of the Argentine sky. She could see herds of cattle and sheep grazing in the distance. Humming birds, vivid with gold and scarlet, and bright thrushes with their cheery calls darted about through the sunny air. A sense of content and well-being flooded through her. For the moment she was a part of this immensity of estancia, with a definite responsibility of looking out for the welfare of one of its peon families.

Angela's mother was standing by the doorway of their cottage as Terry rode up, waving. Terry was wondering whether she should bring up the subject of Angela's secret trouble. But the instant she had tied her horse to a post and moved into the shelter of the house with the woman, she knew she could not mention it. Because in Angela's mother's eyes was the same bewilderment and fear!

She chattered on brightly, but haltingly, in her uncertain Spanish as Angela's mother raved about making mate, and brought out the clean samples to spread across the table. Slowly Angela's mother, too, was lured out of her private worries with the delight of the new house, these beautiful materials that would soon hang at her windows, the asada. . . . Breathlessly she made her selection.

Terry nodded as the peon woman looked up quickly for reassurance. "You choose well. It will be very pretty!"

Angela's mother trembled with excitement. Nervously she tucked a wisp of black hair back into her neat low knot. Then she burst out, "Senorita Kimberly is most kind to us!" Her dark eyes so like Angela's searched Terry's face suddenly with tense thought. She was Terry felt, on the verge of confidence.

Terry said gently, "Senorita Kimberly wants you to be happy. You know that."

The woman's dark face was a

battleground of emotions. "I know that," she repeated dully, then suddenly burst out passionately, "But, Senorita—"

Even as Terry waited for the words, the sound of a galloping horse outside brought terror to the woman's face. She turned and ran out of the house, around to the back. When Terry reached her, she was just gathering up the child, Pedro, in her arms in a fierce gesture of protection.

Terry followed her frightened gaze now toward the horseman. She heard the woman's sigh of relief as the animal came to a stop and the gaucho dropped out of the saddle. It was Angela's father.

The station wagon was standing before Sandy's office when Terry rode by on her way back to the estancia. On sudden impulse she left her horse beside it and went in.

Brooks was with Sandy in the latter's neat cubicle. He looked surprised and pleased at sight of Terry in the doorway. "You're beginning to look at home in your boots and gaucho shirt," he said.

"To the saddle horn, eh?" Terry laughed. She came into the room, flicking her short whip thoughtfully. "By the way, there isn't any trouble among the workers, is there?"

There was a moment of silence. Terry looked up to find Brooks' and Sandy's eyes meeting in amazement. Then Brooks gave a short laugh.

"See here, are you going to be one of those people with hunches, like Jim?" And at Terry's puzzled face, he added, "Sandy and I were just discussing the strange wave of uneasiness and fear that seems to have infected the workers. We hope it's not this secret organization Artigas was speaking about."

"Well, whatever it is," Terry said, "it's causing plenty of trouble BETWEEN the peons as well as among them. Angela's father didn't chase me off the grounds, but he didn't give me any rousing invitation to come around again—and from the way he looked at his wife I think they're having trouble right now over what he's afraid she told me."

Brooks and Sandy asked the question together. "What did she tell you?"

Terry laughed. "Nothing. But she will—or one of them will. Leave it to Sherlock Arnold."

Sandy grinned at her warmly, and Brooks' anxious frown cleared momentarily.

"Luck to you, Sherlock," he said quietly.

STARS SAY—

For Monday, June 18

Monday's astrological forecast is for a rather fortunate turn in public affairs, with dramatic and happy culminations or celebrations of a community or fraternal nature, yet there are signs of setbacks, mean antagonisms, sinister attacks or other undercover situations to vanquish. It is urged that all sense of obligation and responsibility, justice and duty of a private quality, be strictly adhered to and enforced prudently.

Those whose birthday it is may enjoy some public approval and honor, with celebrations and dramatic events, yet be confronted by obstacles, delays, sinister and underhanded matters to try the temper and test the soul. In all connections, observe a sense of duty, obligations and be just and fair in all needful decisions, personal and business.

Scoring Correctly

IN PRACTICALLY all parts of the country, reports crop up occasionally about changes in the scoring of both rubber and duplicate contract bridge, causing confusion and arguments. To straighten out people who have been misled in that way, here goes for a simple summary of the official scoring. Let's start with rubber scoring, then give the few ways in which duplicate scoring is different.

Rubber Contract Bridge

Odd tricks bid and won count: Clubs or Diamonds, 20 each; Hearts or spades, 30 each; No Trump, 40 for the first, 30 for each subsequent. Doubling doubles those values, redoubling quadruples them. Vulnerability does not affect them. 100 such points constitute a game.

Overtricks count: Undoubled, the trick value; doubled, 100 not vulnerable, 200 vulnerable; redoubled, 200 not vulnerable, 400 vulnerable.

Making any doubled or redoubled contract, 50.

Undetricks count for defenders: Undoubled, 50 not vulnerable, 100 vulnerable; doubled, 100 for the first, 200 for each subsequent, not vulnerable, and 200 for the first, 300 for each subsequent, vulnerable; redoubled, twice the doubled value.

Honor counts: Four trump honors in one hand, 100; 5 trump honors or 4 aces at No Trump, 150. Not changed by doubling or redoubling.

Slams bid and made count: Little, 500 not vulnerable, 750 vulnerable; Grand, 1,000 not vulnerable.

PLAN GRIDIRON TEAMS

able, 1,500 vulnerable. Not increased by doubling or redoubling. Rubber bonus: Two-game rubber, 700; three-game rubber, 500. Unfinished rubber: Winners of one game score 300. If only one side has a part score in an unfinished game, 50 points.

Duplicate Contract Bridge
Same as rubber scoring except for the following differences:

In place of rubber bonus, game bonuses are awarded, 300 for a game bid and made on a deal by a not vulnerable pair, 500 by a vulnerable pair.

For making a part-score contract, 50 points.

Game and part-score bonuses are added to the value of tricks, plus (in case of a doubled or redoubled contract) the 50 points for making the contract.

Honors do not count in match point duplicates. Do count in total point team play.

NEW YORK, June 18—The hot pennant races in both major leagues were reflected at the gate yesterday as seven doubleheaders drew 160,675 paid admissions.

Only the Chicago Cubs at Cincinnati failed to draw, but weather which rained out the second game held the crowd to 7,487. Season attendance records were set at Philadelphia, where 34,716 saw the Yankees and Athletics play, and at Pittsburgh, where 32,396 watched the St. Louis Cards win twice. Cleveland at St. Louis Browns was rained out.

O'BRIEN 'SATISFACTORY'

JOINING THE ELITE

By Jack Sords

GEE WALKER, CINCINNATI OUTFIELDER, VETERAN OF A BIG LEAGUE CAMPAIGN HOPING TO JOIN THE SELECT GROUP OF PLAYERS WHO HAVE MADE 2000 OR MORE HITS DURING THEIR CAREERS

NEW YORK, June 18—A three-way split of the turf's coveted triple crown apparently was assured today as the three-year-olds headed toward the $50,000-added Belmont with Preakness victor Polynesian ineligible and Kentucky Derby winner Hoop Jr. lame in his stall.

A wide-open battle was forecast for Saturday's final leg of the triple crown because the three top colts in Pimlico's richest Preakness obviously will not go to the post and Pavot has been stopped in both his starts over a distance.

Polynesian, from the stable of Mrs. P. A. B. Widener, would have been the horse to beat on the basis of his wins in the Withers mile and the Preakness. The dark brown colt proved his class as he ran eight rivals into the light tan track at Pimlico to capture the run for the black-eyed Susans.

But neither Polynesian nor Darby Dieppe, who finished third in both the Derby and the Preakness, had been nominated for the Belmont.

As for little Hoop, he pulled up lame after the run at old hilltop and undoubtedly will remain in the barn come Saturday.

And as for Pavot, who was the wonder horse of 1944 when he won all eight of his juvenile starts, Polynesian had fixed his wagon for the second time in two series. The Widener colt bested Pavot by a half length in the Withers mile, Pavot's first start of '45. He did it again in the Preakness at a mile and three-sixteenths to prove that the first time was no fluke. Pavot wound up a fading field to appear a poor risk at the added Belmont distance of a mile and a half.

Hoop Jr. served second from the fast-closing Darby Dieppe and the Doge held on for fourth with Pavot fifth. Sea Swallow sixth, Alex is seventh, Adonis eighth and Bobanet ninth. The payoff to Polynesian was a record $66,170, bettering Hoop Jr.'s Derby winnings and the Preakness mark of $60,075 won last year by Pensive. His time was a fair 1:58.4/5—one and four-fifths seconds over Alab's 1942 record.

Who carries on from here is a mystery.

LOMBARDO'S AUTOGRAPHS

Guy Lombardo will inaugurate a series of salutes to Army and Navy hospitals by playing the favorite songs of the wounded servicemen at these hospitals on his "Musical Autographs" program, Tuesdays. Camp Edwards General Hospital, Cape Cod, Mass., is the first to be saluted Tuesday. The "favorite five" of the boys at that hospital are "Through With Love," "My Dreams Are Getting Better," "In the Mood for Love," "My Dreams Are Getting Better," "In the Mood for Love," "My Ideal" and "Just a Prayer Away."

"JUDY" OPENS BALL SEASON

The baseball season opens, but only after Judy has thrown two strikes at the team, in the comedy-drama, "A Date With Judy," Tuesday. Judy comes close to ruining the season by luring the star of the team toward more intellectual matters, but with typical luck, everything ends well. Louise Erickson stars as Judy, with Dix Davis as her brother Randolph.

"THE DOCTOR FIGHTS"

The story of Captain H. H. Keasler, a fighting physician who was decorated for his valiant work in the Pacific, is portrayed by Robert Montgomery on "The Doctor Fights" dramatization to be heard on Tuesday. Montgomery is now a Lt. Commander USNR (inactive).

The "favorite five" of the boys at that hospital are "Through With Love," "My Dreams Are Getting Better," "In the Mood for Love," "My Dreams Are Getting Better," "In the Mood for Love," "My Ideal" and "Just a Prayer Away."

"JUDY" OPENS BALL SEASON
The baseball season opens, but only after Judy has thrown two strikes at the team, in the comedy-drama, "A Date With Judy," Tuesday. Judy comes close to ruining the season by luring the star of the team toward more intellectual matters, but with typical luck, everything ends well. Louise Erickson stars as Judy, with Dix Davis as her brother Randolph.

"THE DOCTOR FIGHTS"
The story of Captain H. H. Kessler, a fighting physician who was decorated for his valiant work in the Pacific, is portrayed by Robert Montgomery on "The Doctor Fights" dramatization to be heard on Tuesday. Montgomery is now a Lt. Commander USNR (inactive).

RADIO NEWS NOTES
Work for Max Marchin and stardom on stage and screen is in the offing. At least, that's the feeling of most of the radio artists and the record seems to bear them out. Max, producer of "The FBI" in Peace and War," discovered Renee Carson and Peggy Knudson, both now of the screen, and now Grace Albert, currently in his Saturday night series, has been offered a fat part in the forthcoming Broadway show, "Fifty-Fifty." In previous years Marchin brought to fame many stars now cavorting on the screen.

When the Andrews Sisters return from their two-months overseas entertainment tour this Summer, the girls and their "Eight-To-the-Bar Ranch" airshow cast will make an appearance at the Paramount Theatre, New York, before resuming their Fall season of broadcasts.

Dick Haymes and Helen Forrest will be hearing voices on their "Everything for the Boys" show Tuesday night—that of their new mixed choral group and the swingy Rhythm Swingette.

The Office of War Information this week commences the Sunday airshow, "The Life of Riley" for the script of June 6, which had the Seventh War Bond Drive as its theme. The OWI asked that a copy of the script be forwarded to Washington because they consider the war loan plug was worked into

Canning Sugar Coupons Again Being Issued By Ration Board

NINE POUNDS PERSON IS NEW COUNTY QUOTA

Certificates To Be Issued Only To Persons Who Have Received No Sugar

Canning sugar applications were being processed again Monday after a two weeks "freeze". Pickaway county's War Price and Rationing board resumed the issuance of canning sugar certificates to housewives on the reduced basis of nine pounds, maximum, per person.

Under the new regulations Circleville and Pickaway county housewives may receive a maximum of nine pounds for each member of their household. The previous basis was first established at 20 pounds and was shortly after reduced to fifteen pounds per person up to a maximum of eight persons to one household.

Certificates will be issued to only those persons who have not received any canning sugar to date. The nine pound issuance was established by OPA on the basis of the number of persons in the area who have not made any application.

Quotas were set up last week when OPA workers and officials met in Columbus. They were briefed on what the sugar situation would be in their particular areas. Some areas were not permitted to issue nine pounds per person. Areas were limited to what they might issue on the basis of what they had already overissued before the canning sugar ration freeze.

The nine pound maximum was allowed in the Columbus area because the OPA boards have followed a "careful rationing" program of issuing certificates. Columbus district boards have only over issued 2,000,000 pounds. In that national picture this figure was considered comparatively good.

Under the nine pound maximum plan, persons who have received seven and one-half or eight pounds will not be eligible for the remaining pound or pounds and one-half, since the new figure is based on the number in the district who have not received any canning sugar.

Not all our tankers carry oil. Water, too, is vital on shipboard. To supply this need, a number of water tank ships have been built. They can carry 200,000 gallons of fresh water. These vessels will serve principally at seaports where it is more convenient to secure a fresh supply of water than to make sea water drinkable by dehydration.

To Quit Norway

KIRSTEN FLAGSTAD, internationally famed opera star, has announced she will never sing in Norway again and would like to quit her homeland forever. The comedy star flatly denies the Norwegians' charge that she sang in Berlin during the war and hopes to go to the United States where "I know I have many friends." Her husband, Henry Johansen, wealthy lumber merchant, has been arrested for war profiteering. (International)

Old B-19—Army's Flying Laboratory

XB-19A NOW—It was the B-19.

Exclusive Central Press Dispatch
PATTERSON FIELD, Dayton, O.—What became of the B-19?

Remember her? She's the biggest airplane ever built.

She first took flight on June 19, 1941. No bombs ever dropped from her voluminous belly on the enemy. Yet she has contributed much to the design of the super-bombers now delivering fire bombs and high explosives to the Mikado's doorstep.

The B-19, built by Douglas, has served the Air Technical Service as a giant laboratory on wings. She has provided many answers to baffling questions about design, production and operation of huge aircraft.

She is now known as the XB-19A. Having accomplished her mission as an experimental airplane, she soon will go into service as a cargo carrier.

To Be Cargo Ship

At this field the ATSC is stripping her of turrets and other bomber equipment, and installing tie-down racks, a reinforced floor and other accoutrements necessary to handling war material.

She will carry, the engineers estimate, 45,000 pounds of cargo, depending upon the length of the haul and fuel requirements.

What has already been achieved with the XB-19A as a flying laboratory is a dramatic chapter in the story of America's research and progress in the air.

Still the largest airplane yet built, with its 212-foot wingspread and 132-foot fuselage, the great craft now represents a total cost to the Army and the Douglas company of some $6,000,000.

The big ship never flew against the enemy but has served ably as Air Force's giant laboratory on wings.

As a flying test stand, the XB-19A has thoroughly proven two radically different types of engines, two different propellers, dozens of new instruments, countless items of electrical and hydraulic equipment, has provided reams of information on the construction and operation of large airplanes.

One type of engine which it flight-tested now carries B-29s over Tokyo, the second engine will power an airplane which cannot yet be named.

To the Army Air Forces, those things mean precious time saved in projects of vital importance. Brig. Gen. F. O. Carroll, chief of ATSC's Engineering division, puts it this way:

"Experience we have gained with the XB-19A and the questions it has enabled us to answer have considerably accelerated our program for long-range heavy bombardment airplanes."

For original tests the B-19 was equipped with four Wright Duplex R-3350 engines, each turning a three-bladed 17-foot propeller. Rated first at 1,800 horsepower, these engines were subsequently stepped up to 2,200 horsepower, eventually were installed in the B-29 Superfortress, the B-32 Dominator and the C-69 Constellation.

In January, 1942, the airplane arrived at Wright Field to continue the program which had been planned for it. First project undertaken at Wright Field was an installation of exterior bomb shackles under the wings, purely as an experiment. No extended tests were necessary, for armament experts calculated that with a full load in its bay and under the wings the plane could Guam-Hawaii flight was completed in 15 hours and 43 minutes and the overall trip consumed 35 hours and 58 minutes of flying time.

The big superbomber's average speed on the Hawaii-Washington flight was 229 miles per hour. It arrived here at 10:43 p. m. EWT Saturday night.

The inboard propellers can be put in reverse pitch, utilizing backward thrust for braking the plane during landings. This alone was found almost as effective as the brakes themselves.

Probably the most complete engine flight-test data ever recorded became available when the XB-19A went aloft with its new power plants.

Shakedown hops showed increased performance, with speeds well above 250 miles per hour, and satisfactory operation at altitudes between 25,000 and 30,000 feet.

Despite the fact the XB-19A's basic design was begun by Douglas engineers back in 1936, it employed numerous advanced features which were to be tested for the first time.

The XB-19A had a new "boost" control system and a unique supplementary control system of "flying tabs." With the tabs, for example, when the pilot wants to move the ponderous rudder to right or left, he simply actuates a tab, which is much like a little rudder set within the main one. Its resistance to the airstream causes the big rudder to swing over as desired.

Another first for big bombers was in use of the dorsal fin, to add stability and control. The XB-19A likewise gave both pilot and copilot the benefit of individual and complete sets of flight instruments. Too, this was the first time a bomber had a power-operated nose turret provided in its original design.

Current needs and requirements will determine where and when the XB-19A will make its initial runs as a cargo transport. But wherever it goes, new pages will be written in its record of achievement.
